Recognizing and Treating Heart Failure

When Thursday, February 22, from 11 a.m. to noon

Where Boulder Jewish Community Center, 6007 Oreg Ave.

Nearly 6 million Americans suffer from heart failure, a serious condition where the heart can't pump enough blood to the rest of the body. Many are unaware they have this potentially fatal condition because some of the most common symptoms — such as shortness of breath and fatigue — are often mistaken for normal signs of aging.

Our speaker is Dr. Scott Blois, who leads the first and only heart failure clinic in Boulder County. He will describe the signs of heart failure and provide an update on the latest treatment options.
