- Speakers Srinil Iyengar, MD, of Boulder Heart
Alan Zacharias, MD, of Associated Neurologists

Strokes strike nearly 800,000 Americans each year, killing about 140,000 and forever changing the lives of those who survive. Fortunately, there are ways you can control and treat the risk factors for stroke.

Learn the warning signs of a stroke and how healthy lifestyle choices can lower your risk. Then hear about innovative treatments for heart-related conditions that can increase your chances of having a stroke such as atrial fibrillation (AFib) and patent foramen ovale (PFO).
